THE MISSING PAPERS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—It seems that Secretary Boutwell is considering the kind of action he will take in regard to the stolen papers. Any action of this kind is not taxable. When the requisition for refunding this decision for official distribution or otherwise is presented to the Treasurer, he will be inclined to sign it, and still has the requisition in his possession. This for the present, prevents the decision from taking effect.

TORPEDO BOATS.

The Navy Department is about to begin the construction of two torpedo boats authorized by the last Congress, and for which $100,000 was appropriated. The department has given great attention to perfecting the torpedo system, and a number of officers and others, with all the appliances and information the government can command, has been busily engaged, for a long time, in making the necessary experiments. Great secrecy, as has been observed, but it is known that the authorities are well satisfied with the result thus far attained.

CONSUL M. BUTLER.

Consul General to Egypt, has forwarded to the State Department his answer to the charges lately published against him. The contents of the document cannot be ascertained. No action will be taken in the matter by the Department.

THE CHANGE IN THE CABINET.

LARCENY OF NATIONAL BANK NOTES.

About 1,000 colored people arrived here this morning from Virginia. They were accompanied by a strong escort of cavalry, and were quartered in the Capitol and in the buildings used by the colored people of this city. They then went to Shiloh Church, where a celebration of the day was had. They left in the evening, and are the guests of the negroes, who reside in the vicinity of Alexandria.

The Case of Moses Davis—Darwinism Coming—Soldiers' Reunion.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 4.—Application has been made to Judge Baker to have the sentence of Moses Davis, the murderer, commuted. Imprisonment for life. Governor Baker has appointed the 18th instant for hearing the application, and the execution of the sentence, which is death, and fixed for August 18, will be postponed accordingly. Davis was convicted of the murder of Mr. Rawlings' step-father, at the last term of the Supreme Court. The sheriff is making preparations for carrying into effect the sentence of the court, and his morning applied for an order appointing a guard for the jail. The order will not be issued to-day, as there was no complaint made against him. At the time of the explosion his little crime had run and he had no business.

Chas. Franklin, boiler-maker, Jersey City, stated that he built the boiler of the Westfield in 1861, of the best Pennsylvania iron. He considered it a first-rate job—as good as could be made.

John A. Sands, a practical engineer, was examined, and gave professional testimony as to the insecurity of steam on the boiler of the Westfield. He said there was nothing to prevent the explosion was the result of an excessive pressure of steam.

At the conclusion of his testimony the investigation adjourned until 10 o'clock to-day.

The victims of the Westfield disaster number 100, and it is believed that all who have been scalded will eventually die.

Nine cases of sunstroke occurred yesterday, three fatal. The weather is less sultry to-day, and there have been no cases reported.

Wurts failed to put in an appearance, and the bail was refunded.

THE WESTFIELD CALAMITY.

The examination of the engineer of the late disaster to the Westfield was continued this morning.

Wm. A. Lightfull was placed on the stand. Witness, referring to the statement made yesterday, said that he had been more than twenty-seven pounds of steam to explode the Westfield's boiler, and that he considered it a first-class boat. In position that the longitudinal crack in discovered after the explosion was caused by the explosion. If the crack was more than eighteen inches long, a gauge of steam could not have caused it. It was not an explosion, and if less than that length it would require still greater pressure to cause it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hall—Said: I examined the boiler, after the explosion, and found the longitudinal seams of the boiler intact. Found the boiler had not exploded though. The explosion might have started there and then the whole boiler exploded. I think that the boiler of the Westfield was a good boiler. In every sense of the word, or it would not have caused such destruction. If it was a weak boiler that burnt with but little damage to life and the Westfield's boiler, or thirty-two might have been killed. I think it must have taken all of thirty-two. My instructions to my assistants are to fix the safety valve at 50 lbs above 20 lbs. pressure. Have been safety valves set at 50 lbs. up to twenty-seven. Witness refused a circumstance that occurred on one of the Union Line boats. Mr. Kennedy, a workman on the construction train on the North Missouri Railroad, while attempting to get on the train when in motion, fell and was killed. His father is a farmer, near Bloomfield, Iowa.

Soldiers' Orphans' Home Investigation.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 4.—The Investigating Committee closed its labors at the Soldiers' Orphans' Home, this evening, and adjourned until the evidence taken could be printed. Governor Palmer has been summoned to attend. The examination into the charges against Superintendent Reed, as to his discipline, treatment, and training of its inmates will be taken up, in which the officers have been discharged, their cases will be brought up and investigated. Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The extreme heat of the weather to-day somewhat checked business, but, notwithstanding, the stock market was buoyant on light transactions, and advanced in the morning, afterward fearing, which gave additional strength to the market. There was an active business in New York Central stock, which advanced to 93¾, and early in 94; Wabash, 34¼; Northwest common, 51¾; preferred, 64; Chicago and Rock Island, 99¼; Fort Wayne, 100¼; Toledo and Wabash, 49¾; Pacific Mail, 47¾; and Union Pacific, 39¾. The market closed with an upward tendency, and at the highest prices of the day for the leading stocks. The advance in Union Pacific was on a report that harmony had been restored between the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors. Lake Shore seems to be dull, awaiting the action of the Executive Committee on the dividend question. It is reported that the stock dividend will take the shape of convertible bonds.

MONEY.

The large decrease in the bullion in the Bank of England, reported by the cable yesterday, was the subject of much discussion in regard to its possible effect upon the price of gold and money as well as its influence on the course of our money market. France and the continent of Europe have been drawing on London for gold for some time past, and America has been shipping specie freely, and, therefore, the drain was not felt. For two weeks past we have shipped but little specie to Europe, and, hence, the bank of England, without this source of supply, is beginning to feel the continental drain. The money market is easy at 4 to 5 per cent on call, and time loans, 6 per cent for short dates, and 5 to 6 per cent. Prime business paper ranges from 5 to 7 per cent.

THE GOVERNMENT BOND MARKET

was steady. The foreign bankers have orders in the market for large amounts of bonds, which cannot be filled at their prices, although the rates are very close to the current quotations. The supply of bonds is very limited, especially in old issues. Private intelligence from London quote Central Pacific bonds at 85½ to 86; Erie, 57 to 57½; and Illinois Central, 93 to 93½. The closing quotations in this market for Pacific Railroad securities were as follows: Central Pacific bonds, 85½@86; Union Pacific, 39¾@39¾; land grants, 80¼@80½; sinking fund, 85¼@85¾.

THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET

is dull. Prime bankers' sixty-day sterling bills range from 109¾ to 109⅞, and sight 110⅜ to 110⅝. The engagements of specie to-morrow are estimated at $775,000.

THE GOLD MARKET

was intensely dull throughout the day, with all the transactions at 111@111⅛. The rates paid for borrowing were 3, 4, 5½, and 1 per cent to flat. After the board adjourned the quotations were 111⅛, to 111¼, all the close.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The medium grades of State and Western flour are again negative, with a tendency to lower prices to move active for export. Several thousand barrels of fair shipping extra State sold at $5.20@5.40 with prices at $5.50@5.75. Low grades were quiet and comparatively steady. The better grades were very full. It was impossible to sell them, except to a jobbing way.

The wheat market was quoted 3c better, and the offerings were limited, so that buyers who had freight room to fill were compelled to pay more for what they needed. Only a decided improvement could have been realized.

Corn was 1c better, and moderately active. The non-arrival of the new crop keeps the old out of the market, but independent of this fact, there was a better feeling in the market.

The Times of this morning remarks: "It is now fourteen days since we placed the wonderful question of J. D. Caton before the public, and enough of it, we imagine, has been said to give a good deal to anyone on the subject, but our last denial the accuracy of those statements, or the truth of the facts therein contained, has called forth from the same quarter a new and more startling statement than the old Board of Supervisors. But observe, these very journals do not charge the old board with stealing the money. They charge it with having stealing the money. They charge it with having paid it to Hall and Connolly. Now, we ask, who got the money? The advocates of Hall and Connolly dare not face that question. They dare not say that Henry Smith took it, for he is dead."

Germany.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A correspondent in London has had an interview with the eldest prince of Prussia, now Prince Imperial of Germany, and reports their conversation as follows:

Correspondence. Many Englishmen seem to be of the opinion that one of their national functions is to control the course of affairs on the continent.

Prince. That can hardly be. Having no stock of the kind on hand, you will excuse me if I remain; may fairly leave the continent to those who inhabit it, and influences are at work there which no single nation can control.

C. Germany is not generally supposed to think so.

P. Germany makes no pretension to the leadership of the continent. It exist at length to be manifest that no country can do that. All that a nation can fairly demand is that its will shall be obsolete within its own borders; that it shall be the sole judge of the means by which it works out the development of its own national life. In that sense, alone, will there a purpose for Germany to the Italian movement. A deplorable blindness in the respect but nearly let to an erroneous intervention, to pass own American struggle, though, fortunately conflicting interests and civilization were spared that calamity.

C. Yet Germany was not supposed to be indifferent to the fate of the Pope, and to the Catholic interest in France.

P. That feeling was dictated by the supreme military considerations of the moment. I am at a loss to understand how it could have been taken for any other cause. I think I trace in your remark a fallacy which has caused to us immeasurable injustice. We are not, for the present, either aggressive or conquering. We are simply defensive. This is not to say, and for the best of all reasons, that we have no interest in the future. We have interests that every nation has, and for the best of all reasons we shall defend them. But we have no conception of conquest, and we have no desire to dictate a form of government to any nation. We have no wish to interfere in the internal affairs of France. We have determined to be led away by the cry should have been raised against us, and we were threatened precisely against that kind of dictation applied to Germany.

C. I remember with what energy Prussia decided a recent rumor of a projected alliance between France and Austria. Prussia was believed to be resisting the spread of Republican doctrines.

P. Prussia has no sympathy with Republicanism, but still it was decided on principle, as it was absolutely necessary to the interests of Germany, and it is supposed that the whole transaction was misunderstood. Prussia was not attempting to fight the battles of Austria, but was preparing to fight her own battles, if compelled to do so. Mart and Metternich were both dead. The relations between Austria and Prussia were friendly. Francis Joseph and the other crowned great sovereigns of Europe were all friendly. Prussia was not attempting to dictate to Austria. Prussia was not attempting to dictate to Austria. Prussia was not attempting to dictate to Austria. Prussia was not attempting to dictate to Austria.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 4.—Under orders from Washington to reduce the cost of assessing and collecting the revenue, Commissioner Douglass, Deputy Harsden, United States Assessor for Revenue District No. 8, lately constructed from the Second District, has consolidated the two districts. The consolidation saves the pay of one Assessor, one Assistant Assessor, and one Clerk at Madison. After considerable pressure by the Republican members of the Legislature, the Democratic majority have consented to the passage of resolutions directing the President to proceed to the appointed place of assembly, and give notice of the same through the Republican. On Tuesday only eighteen members were present. Every precaution was taken to prevent mistakes and loss, and the bank refused to pay a dollar of great carelessness in receiving packages of money at the counter without first examining the packages to ascertain whether any money were to be paid and the amount stated.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1871.

REPUBLICAN CONSERVATISM.

THE BRIDEWELL COMMISSIONERS.

The Mayor on Thursday evening concluded most effectually in showing the falsity of the professions of the majority of the Aldermen. Last Monday night these men, in rejecting the Mayor's nominations for the fourth time, professed that their opposition was not to the organization of the Bridewell, nor in the interests of Mayor, nor to appropriate the present admirable system; but that it was exclusively to Messrs. Hammond, Davis, and Derrickson. They insisted that the Mayor should withdraw these men, and then they would vote for any other persons he might nominate. Though no person believed there was any truth in these professions of the minority, though the public were satisfied that the majority was as really corrupt as he acts indicated, Mayor Mason wisely consented to put these men to the test. He therefore withdrew Messrs. Derrickson, and Davis, and nominated Messrs. Mancell Talcott, Judge Grant Goodrich, and Murray Nelson. These are respectable citizens; earnest, sincere men, who, the community believed, would, if chosen, act not ward-bummers, political scullerons, drunkards or loafers, whereupon Schintz and Schaffner, Tracy and Montgomery, the Powells, and Walsh and McGrath, Busse and Kreuzberg, Rossette and Scheidt, and the others, including honest John Buehler, voted against and rejected them.

Schintz and Walsh, of course, place their opposition to voting for the Mayor's nominees on the ground that the press cannot drive them to vote for a respectable man as Bridewell Commissioner! They defy the press, and insist that they will resist the confirmation of any man holding a higher moral, intellectual, or social standing than their own. The whole scheme of these men now stands confessed. Their plea that they objected to Hammond, Davis, and Derrickson because of the Mayor's persistence in presenting their names only, is falsified by their own record. Their real objection is to the class of men to whom the Mayor proposes to commit the charge of our Bridewell. They have no personal objection to Hammond, or Davis, or Goodrich, or Talcott, or any of the others, but they have an objection to the class to which these men belong. Schaffner, Tracy, these men belong. Schaffner, Tracy, these men belong. Schaffner, Tracy,

SECOND TOUR OF THE WHITE STOCKINGS.

☞ On the 26th of the present month the White Stockings will start on their second Eastern tour. They will play at Olympics, of Philadelphia, on the 28th; the Mutuals, in New York, on Monday, the 30th; the Atlantics, in Philadelphia, on Wednesday, the 30th; the Nationals, in Washington, on Friday, September 1; the Olympics, in Washington (an exhibition game), on Saturday, the 2d; the Bostons, in Boston, on Wednesday, the 6th; the Eckfords, in Brooklyn, on Thursday, the 7th, and then home. This trip involves seven games, three of them for the championship, and it is expected that the series with the Athletics and Mutuals will have been ended, while another game will have to be played with the Athletics in this city. This programme is liable to alteration, as it is impossible to say how the Eckfords will play, having travelled the greater portion of the season, and will not much resemble the team that visited the city.

THE WHITE STOCKING-HAYMAKER CONTROVERSY.

In order to put the controversy between the Haymaker Club, looking toward a series of championship games with the White Stockings, to the test to be played in Chicago, on the 3d inst., and indefinitely thereafter, they will play Craver in the nine on that day, if all the players can be found on yesterday, forwarded a telegram to Troy, requesting the late pitcher to report for duty, and promptly informing the Haymaker Secretary that unless Craver appeared the White Stockings would not play the Troy club with Craver in the nine, either as pitcher or as an outside game, nor will they play the Haymakers at all, if they do not play the Troy club with Craver in the nine, either as pitcher or as an outside game. The letter closes with the statement that the Haymakers must pay the Forest Cities, of Cleveland, Ohio, $100 for the last game played by the latter. Stocking management is final and irrevocable and the parties to the difficulties cannot fail to be considered by everybody, save, perhaps, the Haymaker Club and the Chicago Times.

THE GAME TO-DAY.

The game between the White Stockings and the Keokuxens, promises to be an interesting contest, both on account of the probability that the score will be small on both sides, and through a general desire to see how the latter nine and Hatfield, the former pitcher, will acquit themselves in a professional game.

LOCAL MATTERS.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

It transpires that an incorrect impression was conveyed by the paragraph in THE TRIBUNE concerning the presentation of a suit of clothes to King, of the White Stocking nine. King had not received the suit paid for by the Mutual account, but after the two Mutual games he was given one paid for by Mr. John Cudmore to draw for a tailor's order, and he has since done so. He has availed himself of the generous offer, and has received the suit. THE TRIBUNE regrets the omission of mention of the generous offer, and the non-payment of the suit of clothes.

The third game in the match series between Harry Cheate, of Springfield, champion of Ohio, and Joseph Craver, champion of Illinois, took place yesterday at the Tremont House, in this city, in the presence of the two States and a score of Ohio, who visited the city for the purpose. Cheate was unable to score, and Craver continued until 11:45, Garney retiring with 1,000 points to his credit. Craver continued until the fourth hundred, when Cheate made a run of 185. Craver was unable to score, and Cheate continued until 1:30, Craver retiring with 1,000 points to his credit. The game was won by Craver by a score of 1,000 points to 800. OPIUM'S SLAVE.

A Well-Known Citizen a Victim of the Drug.

The Career and Downfall of an Eminent Druggist.

Saved From Freezing Only to Become a Vagrant.

"The vicissitudes of fortune" is a phrase of a most emphatic character. Like charity, it covereth a multitude of sins, and not infrequently also of a very patent and exaggerated description. The particular vicissitude, sarcastic, is generally known as somber and shorter name—"misfortune"—and the individuals known to fame, we at present have in mind, are not unfrequently numerous.

But these errant are, in fact, inevitable. No man can be said to have arrived at years of discretion who has not, at some time, come into misfortune, and also in broken pieces. Misfortune is a living example of the aphorism promulgated himself in the office of THE TRIBUNE, rather emphatically, but retired noticeably unceremoniously, a day or two ago.

Chicago, old tobacconists especially, will remember the drug store on the corner of Randolph and Clark streets, kept by Dr. Hall. Many will remember the tall, good looking gentlemanly, genial young man who presided there as a druggist. A still wider circle of the city knew the ladies of being one of the most skilful members of the profession in Chicago. He was affable and courteous to his customers, prompt, correct in his business habits, and withal, he was married to a most estimable lady, and blessed with a beautiful family of children. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was universally esteemed by his brethren of the craft. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was one of the most active workers in the Sunday-school connected with that church. He was a man of means, and was the owner of the building in which his drug store was located. He was a man of fine personal appearance, and was the owner of a handsome turnout, which he frequently used in driving his family out to the parks and boulevards. He was a man who had a host of friends, and who was universally respected by all who knew him.

Such was Dr. Hall, the druggist, a few years ago. Now he is a miserable, wretched, degraded, and despised vagrant, who begs from door to door for the means to purchase the drug which has wrought his ruin, and which has changed him from a man of position and influence to a miserable outcast, who is shunned by all his former friends and acquaintances.

The story of his downfall is a sad one, and is told in a few words. He became addicted to the use of opium. He began its use in a small way, and for a long time kept the habit from the knowledge of his friends. But, like all who contract the habit, he found that he could not break away from it, and he gradually increased the amount used, until he found himself a confirmed slave to the drug. He was unable to break away from it, and he continued to use it, until he found himself a physical wreck, and his business affairs in a hopeless condition. He neglected his wife and family, who soon began to understand the unfortunate experience of actual poverty.

Mr. —— was well connected in the city, and his relatives and friends made the most strenuous efforts to put him right. They represented the ruin he was causing to his wife, but their remonstrances were unavailing. They represented the disgrace he was causing to his children, but their remonstrances were unavailing. They represented the ruin he was causing to himself, but their remonstrances were unavailing. Finally, failing in the accomplishment of their object, and neglecting
